

PLAN FOR FINANCE IS ALL EXPLAINED

CARLISLE TO THE HOUSE COMMITTEE.

Members of the Committee on Banking Listen to His Explanation of His Scheme for Currency Reform—More Money Needed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Secretary Carlisle appeared before the house committee on banking and currency yesterday to present in detail features of the new currency plan proposed in his annual report and indorsed in the President's message. There was much interest in the hearing as it was felt that Mr. Carlisle would lend a more popular interest to the subject than had appeared in the formal report. The crowd in attendance made it necessary to use the large room of the committee of ways and means. Besides the full membership of the committee, Senator Romero, the Mexican minister, and many members of congress were present. Mr. Carlisle adopted an easy, conversational style of address. He said he was ready to answer questions from the committee as well as elaborate his own views. He took up each section of his recent recommendations. First, repeal all laws requiring or authorizing the deposit of United States bonds as securities for circulation; and second, permit national banks to issue notes to an amount not exceeding 75 per cent of their paid up and unimpaired capital, but require each bank before receiving notes to deposit a guarantee fund consisting of United States legal tender notes, including treasury notes of 1890 to the amount of 30 per cent upon the circulating notes applied for. This percentage of deposits upon the circulating notes outstanding to be maintained at all times, and whenever a bank retires its circulation in whole or in part, its guarantee fund to be returned to it in proportion to the amount of notes retired. Mr. Carlisle said he was satisfied that the present law requiring the deposit of bonds to secure circulation prevented the elasticity of the currency. "The provision outlined," said Mr. Carlisle, "gives ample protection without the deposit of bonds as required by the present law." Mr. Carlisle said the practical value of a reserve fund of currency was shown in 1893. There was a demand for money, aggregating $40,000,000. The treasury did its best to meet the stringency, but by the time the notes were ready to distribute the demand had gone by and many of the packages of notes were returned unopened. The secretary invited criticism on this particular section.

Chairman Springer asked how the secretary's plan differed from the Baltimore plan. Mr. Carlisle explained the technical difference. The Baltimore plan proposed a deposit of 50 per cent, under certain conditions, while the treasury plan proposed a deposit of 30 per cent. When a bank fails the treasury plan contemplated an assessment on all national banks, they in turn having a lien on the failed bank. Concerning the state bank feature of the plan Secretary Carlisle said: "It suggests merely a plan by which state banks could act if they saw fit. But the government has no direct concern with state institutions. The plan simply gives them the privilege of acting under certain conditions if they see fit."

The secretary then took up the proposition that no national bank note be of less denomination than $10. It would, he said, encourage the circulation of silver certificates of small denominations. These certificates were now crowded into the treasury. Mr. Sperry asked if silver certificates were redeemed in gold.

"No," said the secretary. "There are only two classes of notes redeemed in gold—viz.: the greenbacks and the treasury notes under the Sherman act of 1890."

Mr. Carlisle then took up Sec. 11, the "state bank" feature of his plan. He said as to this that he would consider such state bank notes safe—perhaps perfectly safe would be too strong, but reasonably safe. He suggested a change in the third provision, so that the lien would not cover the funds of guardians and other cestui que trusts.

Referring to wildcat currency the secretary said: "That is a thing of the past. You could no more resume the wildcat system than you could revive the conditions which made it possible. We have advanced far beyond the possibilities of a wildcat system." The secretary said the 10 per cent tax proposed on state banks was sufficient to wipe out their circulation in case they did not observe good conditions. It was practically a prohibitory tax.

Mr. Springer asked why the state banks should not be subjected to exactly the same conditions of reserve, etc., as national banks. Mr. Carlisle added that in his judgment the tax on state banks was unconstitutional. The courts thought otherwise, however.

At this point Mr. Carlisle said he would submit his bill and appear this morning if desired to go over it in detail. It was arranged to have the bill printed.

PROPOSAL TO PURCHASE CUBA.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—In the senate yesterday Messrs. Hill, Blackburn and Carey were in their seats for the first time this session.

Mr. Call (dem., Fla.) presented a resolution setting forth that the independence of the island of Cuba is an object of great importance to the United States, and requesting the President to commence negotiations with Spain for the recognition of the independence of the island and for the guarantee by the United States of the payment of such a sum of money as shall be agreed on between the United States and Spain. The resolution went over until to-day.

Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.) renewed his criticisms of the action of Attorney-General Olney during the Pullman strike. Mr. Pugh of Alabama denied the attorney-general. At 2 o'clock the whole matter went over and the senate, on motion of Mr. Morgan, took up the Nicaragua canal bill, which was read at length. Mr. Morgan favored the bill, and said he thought that the expenditure of the $4,000,000 already spent had demonstrated that the actual cost would be even lower than that estimated by Mr. Menocal, chief engineer. He argued in support of the proposition that contemplated government ownership of the canal. England owned stock in the Suez canal and why should not the United States own stock in the Nicaragua canal? We must act now or abandon the canal to its fate. To abandon it now was a responsibility he was unwilling to assume and a dereliction the people would not forget.

Mr. Mitchell of Oregon briefly expressed his hearty approval of the scheme to build the canal and after an executive session the senate adjourned.

BIG BLAZE RAGED IN OMAHA TODAY

IRON SHUTTERS KEEP FLAMES IN ONE BUILDING.

Wholesale Coffee House Destroyed, Loss Nearly $200,000—Panic in a Louisville Fire—Southern Hotel at Chattanooga Burned.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 11.—Several hundred guests of the Murray and Paxton hotels were routed out of their rooms last night by flames licking the walls of those structures from the burning four-story building of the Omaha Consolidated Coffee company at 1430 Harney street. Their fright, however, was the extent of the damage in that direction, though the coffee company lost more than $100,000.

Flames were discovered bursting from the basement of the coffee company early in the evening and as the building is wedged in between some of the largest structures in the city and in close proximity to the rear of the Paxton and Murray hotels all available fire apparatus at once was ordered to the scene. A peculiar feature of the fire and which was responsible for the heavy loss, was the nature of the fireproof construction of the building. The immense iron shutters which covered all the windows easily were heated to such an extent that the firemen could not reach the interior of the building except on the ground floor and the flames were penned up in the building. The immense stock was almost destroyed.

But, while the inability of the firemen to open the windows lost the coffee company's building, it saved probably $1,000,000 worth of property which it was estimated would have been destroyed had the flames burst out from the windows. By the time the fire had eaten its way through the roof the building was surrounded by engines and the flames smothered. The company is owned by Clark, Miles & Coe. They carried a large wholesale line of coffee, teas and spices. The building was damaged to the extent of $40,000 and the stock something like $100,000, with both covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Louisville Woman and Seven Men Have a Thrilling Adventure.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 11.—Fire broke out yesterday afternoon in the large clothing store of Levy Bros., Third and Market streets. The store was crowded with customers and a panic ensued. Eight employees were rescued from the roof by James Lee, a boy. The loss by fire and water to stock and building can not be approximated yet, but will probably reach $30,000, fully covered by insurance.

Chattanooga's Big Hotel Burned.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 11.—The isolated position of the Southern hotel building, which was destroyed yesterday by fire, alone prevented this city from being swept away. The Knoxville fire department was telegraphed to prepare to render assistance if the emergency arose. A high wind prevailed. The loss was $125,000; insurance, $50,000.

Compo Board Factory Burns.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 11.—C. A. Smith's compo board factory, located at Forty-fourth avenue north and Lyndale, was burned last night and is a total loss. It cost about $50,000 or $60,000. It took the entire department to subdue the flames.

LABOR TURNED OUT IN LARGE NUMBERS

IMPOSING MEETING OF AMERICAN CONFEDERATION.

John Burns and David Holmes Guests of Honor—First Day's Work Is Important—President Gompers in the Chair.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 11.—The American Federation of Labor convened in annual session at 10 o'clock yesterday in Oddfellows' hall, President Samuel Gompers calling the delegates to order. Fully 1,000 representatives of national trades' unions were present to participate in what is considered to promise the greatest meeting ever held in America for the cause of labor. Occupying seats of honor on the platform were John Burns, M. P., and David Holmes, M. P., representatives of the United Trades unions of England, present upon invitation from the American Federation. While not delegates to this congress they will be extended full recognition and their opinions will be daily sought as the deliberations progress. Rody Kenahan, president of the Trades assembly of Denver, made a short speech of welcome, extending the courtesies of the city and promising a program of entertainment in social functions and mountain excursions to intersperse the session of the convention. "Colorado, though a young state, was well organized," he said, "in labor matters, and expected that great good would follow the results of this convention." President Gompers replied to this with a few words of thanks, after which a committee on credentials was named. Thomas N. Patterson of Denver delivered an address on "Labor's Rough but Noble Struggle," and he was succeeded by speeches of a fraternal nature from the English representatives.

The independent labor political platform is as follows: 1. Compulsory education. 2. Direct legislation. 3. A legal eight hour work day. 4. Sanitary inspection of workshop, mine and home. 5. Liability of employers for injury to life, health and body. 6. The abolition of contract system in all public work. 7. The abolition of the sweating system. 8. The municipal ownership of street cars, and gas and electric plants for the public distribution of light, heat and power. 9. The nationalization of telegraphs, telephones, railroads and mines. 10. The collective ownership by the people of all means of production and distribution. 11. The principle of referendum in all legislation. The advocates of the program are confident of its adoption.

President Gompers read his annual report at the afternoon session. He defended the action of the federation in regard to the A. R. U. strike by the assertion that Mr. Debs' proposition submitted to them was a virtual acknowledgment that the strike was a failure. President Cleveland's action at that time he severely censured. Much proposed legislation was indorsed and hope was expressed that the government telegraph and telephone systems would soon be established in connection with the postal department, and unions among government employees recommended as an aid to the movements. The efforts of the officers of the federation in behalf of free coinage of silver were mentioned, and a better understanding of the subject by laboring men generally was reported. The matter of proposed semi-annual conferences with Knights of Labor was referred to the convention, but a union of the organizations was not recommended. Mr. Gompers strongly opposed any movement looking to independent political action by organized labor at present. The present time was suggested as opportune for the inauguration of a vigorous demand for an eight-hour day and for a law prohibiting contract work on government improvements. The proposition to establish compulsory arbitration was denounced. Higher dues for the various unions were suggested as a means of increasing their usefulness and augmenting their strength, and the fact was cited that the only union that has increased its membership in the last year has the highest dues of any in the federation.

Secretary Chris Evans submitted his report of the finances and numerical strength of the federation. There is a balance of $5,191, which is less than at any time since 1890. The report showed that 167 charters were issued during the year for local and central unions and state federations in thirty states.

President Gompers then introduced John Burns, who made a short address, comparing the labor situations in his country and America. President Gompers, in response to Mr. Burns' remarks, said that under no government on earth have laboring men been so imposed upon as in America, but expressed the hope that conditions may soon improve.

The Rev. Myron W. Reed made a brief address. Congratulatory telegrams were read from Eugene V. Debs and James O'Connell.

TALK OF EVANSVILLE WATER WORKS

Residents Begin to Plan for a Plant—Drainage Also Considered.

EVANSVILLE, Dec. 11—The question of water works and drainage is being agitated, and it is hoped that the progressive element may be able to carry the question of such improvements no later than next spring. The lecture by Joseph Cook Friday night was very largely attended. No word of commendation is necessary, the fact that Joseph Cook spoke, establishes the fact of an intellectual feast. Henry Alford and wife of Oregon and Gilbert E. Roe and wife of Madison were guests of Evansville friends Saturday. Stewart Chase of Janesville, did good work for the New York Life in this city last week.

Gossip of Clear Lake.

CLEAR LAKE, Dec. 11—Little Alice Heckbarth is a little better. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Merritt are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy at their home. Mrs. Fred Tillman has gone to Jefferson to spend the winter with her parents there. Mr. and Mrs. Camp intend to move here in the spring from Milwaukee. Mrs. Camp will be remembered as Miss Hattie Price. They bought the Mubert place.

We hit it hard this time. We never trifle with prices. Just think, Vanderpool coal $4.50 per ton. We can give you a good soft coal for $2 per ton. If you want good coal cheap come and see us. Why, several good reliable parties came to our office and told us that our roller screened No. 4 and range are worth $1 per ton more than coal handled the old way.

OWEN TO GET $1,500 FROM GREENE BROS

THE JURY WERE OUT ALL NIGHT LONG.

After Fifteen Hours Deliberation They Finally Agreed on that Sum at Seven O'clock this Morning and Were Discharged—Ellen Schaffer's Case Adjourned Until Tomorrow.

Twelve heavy-eyed men marched out of the circuit court jury room at 7 o'clock this morning. One of them carried a sealed envelope in his hand.

It was a verdict for $1500 in favor of E. J. Owen and against J. L. and M. F. Greene, the tobacco firm.

The case went to the jury at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and not until seven this morning did they decide on a verdict. Fifteen hours had been spent in trying to arrive at a conclusion as to how much was due Mrs. Owen, and during all that time Deputy Sheriff L. M. Nelson, who had the jury in charge, was compelled to stay up also. Of course little is known as to what transpired inside the jury room, but it was said that some of the men "hung out" in the belief that Mr. Owen was entitled to more than the verdict that was given him. It is also said that the whole night was devoted to the discussion pro and con and that there was no nonsense and no armistices declared. The jury was composed of Thomas Honeysett, William Paul, C. Dykeman, J. G. Perkins, T. B. Bassett, William Wonderley, E. G. Turner, David Cross, W. H. Lathers, E. T. Stoneburner, D. Y. Berkalew and A. H. Taylor. They were pretty well tired out when they got through this morning, and one of them remarked feelingly that "the fresh air did seem so good."

The case grew out of a tobacco deal and Mr. Owen sued for $5,000 damages. The plaintiff had some money to invest and he put it in tobacco, purchasing some three hundred cases from Greene Bros. packing. He claimed the tobacco was misrepresented to him; that there were more cases of filler than there should have been; and less cases of wrappers, and the tobacco was not of as good quality as he bargained for.

Mrs. Ellen Schaffer, the "Queen of Orfordville," appeared before Judge Bennett this morning attired in her royal purple, her name being connected with a violation of the excise law; but her attorney, William Smith, being at Darlington, the case was adjourned until to-morrow.

A BIG SERVANT GIRL.

Experience of a Clubman Who Was Fond of Practical Joking.

A certain clubman, who attempted to play a practical joke, was nonplussed in a very unexpected way. He says: "I am very particular about fastening the doors and windows of my house. I do not intend to leave them open at night as an invitation to burglars to enter. You see, I was robbed once in that way last year, and I never mean to be again; so when I go to bed I like to be sure that every door and window is securely fastened."

"Last winter my wife engaged a big, strong country girl, and the newcomer was very careless about the doors at night. On two or three occasions I came down stairs to find a window up or the back door unlocked. I cautioned her, but it did no good. I therefore determined to frighten her. I got some false whiskers, and one night about 11 o'clock I crept down the back stairs to the kitchen, where she was. She had turned down the gas, and was in her chair by the fire fast asleep, as I could tell by her breathing, but the moment I struck a match she woke."

"I expected a great yelling and screaming, but nothing of the sort took place. She bounced out of her seat with a 'you villain!' on her lips, seized a chair by the back, and before I had made a move she hit me over the head, forcing me to my knees. I tried to get up, tried to explain who I was, but in vain. Before I could get out of the room she struck me again, and it was only after I had tumbled up the back stairs that she gave the alarm. Then she came up to my room, rapped at the door and coolly announced: 'Mr. —, please get up. I've killed a burglar.'"

Seeing at Night.

Nocturnal creatures assume night activity for some other reason than that they cannot see by day or that they see better by night. The bat sees admirably in the brightest sunlight, as any one knows who has ever tested one by poking a stick at it. It will open its mouth and make an angry grab at the stick, when it is not near by several inches. Professor Bolles says it is the same with the owl. They see perfectly in bright sunlight, and better at night than most creatures.

Revenge in India.

A prisoner in India recently, on being released, revenged himself on the assistant commissioner who had sentenced him by cutting off one half of his mustache while he was sleeping out of doors on a hot night. It was then found that there was no way of punishing him under the penal code, for, while cutting the hair of a native is punishable as dishonoring the person, there is no such provision for Englishmen, and the bodily harm done was too slight to be considered an offense.

DEATH OF MRS. MARIA H. WHITING.

Former Principal of the School For the Blind Called.

GALESBURG, Ill., Nov. 30—Mrs. Maria H. Whiting, principal of Knox Seminary, the female department of Knox College, died at midnight last night of a general breaking down. She was sixty-seven years old. Mrs. Whiting had been in poor health since the death of her mother last June. She was a native of Sudus, N. Y., and began teaching when she was thirteen years old, and it was her life work. For two years she was matron of the institute for the blind at Batavia, N. Y. Then for thirteen years she was matron of a similar institution at Janesville, Wis. She was appointed principal of the seminary sixteen years ago, and under her management it prospered. She raised the money for building two large additions to the seminary building and one of them was christened Whiting Hall. She was a liberal giver herself to these projects. She also established a conservatory of music. She possessed a strong character and refined and kind manners, and was much esteemed in religious, social and educational circles. The funeral services will be held here Monday.

The above notice clipped from a Chicago paper will recall to many of our people the valuable services of a most estimable christian lady and philanthropist who for many years was a resident of this city. She was matron of the "Wisconsin Institution for the Education of the blind" under Superintendent Little and continued in the service of the state some years after Mr. Little's death. She was religiously devoted to the interests of the blind and contributed generously of her means to assist them after their graduation.

In 1878 she left our institution to take charge of the female department of Knox college at Galesburg, Ill., where she carried the splendid traits of character which she exhibited here and after sixteen years of valuable service in that institution she has laid down the burden of her life work which she so cheerfully and grandly bore, and gone to her eternal rest beloved by all who knew her.

State and County Tax Notice.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—The tax rolls and warrant for the collection of state and county taxes for the city of Janesville, Wis., are now in my hands for collection and all persons interested are requested to make payment thereof at the office of the city treasurer, or the same will be collected at the cost and expense to the person liable for the payment of said taxes. Jas. A. FATHERS, City Treasurer, Dated the 4th day of December, 1894.

Use It In Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the general enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and often times a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

THE CITY WILL GET DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR

MURPHY BONDSMEN ASK FOR NO COMPROMISE.

The Ex-Treasurer, However, Has Checked Up the Records and Finds About $1,200 Which He Never Received—No Proposition Made for Cutting Down.

There is no foundation for the rumors that the city authorities and ex-Treasurer Murphy's bondsmen are about to settle at a less figure than that actually due the city and no proposition of the kind has been talked about. The parties have been together several times but nothing of a definite character has been done. There has been no proposition made to compromise the matter, and perhaps none will be made. Mayor Thoroughgood was seen this morning, and was asked what foundation there was to the reports.

"None whatever," said he. "I have had several consultations with Mr. Murphy's bondsmen, and no proposition for compromise has been made or suggested. Last evening the finance committee held a meeting at which I was present. No one talked of compromise."

It is also understood that Mr. Murphy has checked up amounts aggregating something over $1200, charged to him that he never received, and therefore is not morally bound to pay. It is also stated that Mr. Murphy is ready to make a settlement but at the same time he is naturally anxious to save as much as possible in the sacrifice of his property.

The robber knight pleaded. "May I not hope," he asked, "to exact a tribute from those sweet lips?" His fair captive shivered. "If you can find it in your heart to take advantage of my helplessness—" In her voice was the dull, leaden ring of despair. "To force attentions upon me that are so very unsanitary." From all of which it became at once apparent that the lady had followed the scientific discussions of the day.

Garibaldi's Monument.

A new monument to Garibaldi, and perhaps the finest in Italy, is to be erected in Rome next September. It is to stand on the Janiculum hill, opposite the dome of St. Peter's. It is said that there is not a town in Italy, or even a populous village, that does not contain statues of Victor Emanuel and Garibaldi. The great monument to Victor Emanuel now in course of erection on the Capitol hill will have cost $5,000,000 when completed.

THE INDIAN'S PAY DAY.

When Uncle Sam's Money Is on Hand Poor Lo Becomes Reckless.

"I happened to be at a mission in Idaho a few years ago," said a traveler, "when two government officials arrived with funds with which to pay the Indians for land which had been bought from them by the United States. Each Indian received a check for the amount due him, several thousand dollars being distributed in this way among them. The town where the checks were to be cashed was ten miles from the mission, and by day-break the following morning a large crowd of Indians had collected in front of the bank, waiting to receive their money. At 9 o'clock the doors of the bank were opened and the Indians marched in, presented their checks and received and counted their money. They would not take bills, but demanded that they be paid in gold and silver, which was done.

"As soon as they got the coin they started out to spend it. The chief desire of the men was fast horses, and the dealers took advantage of this and reaped a rich harvest. All day long men could be seen trotting fast horses up and down the street to attract the attention of the Indians, who immediately paid the price asked by the owners if the animals pleased their fancy. Wagons and farm implements were also in great demand. One dealer told me afterwards that he sold $5,000 worth of agricultural implements that day. The squaws also received a portion of the money, and they hurried to the stores, where they bought bright-colored dress goods, shoes, hats and sweetmeats for their children. Some of the prices paid were enormous. One young squaw paid $18 for a pair of kid shoes, $20 for a black lace hat trimmed with bright flowers and $2 for chewing gum."

MANY WAYS TO MAKE A LIVING.

Extraordinary Sagacity and Enterprise of a Thrifty Young Woman.

"There are more ways than one to make a living," said a demure little woman, with flashing black eyes. "I know a woman who was left penniless in New York. She was riding on the elevated road one day when she was struck with the sameness of the advertisements that are posted up in the cars. She thought that she could write good advertisements, and she thought out a lot of little four-line rhymes for a certain article. She submitted them to the advertising manager of that firm, and they were accepted, and now she is making a lot of money every year with her verses extolling various wares."

"Pshaw!" said the blonde who sat next to the demure little woman. "I knew of a case right here in Buffalo that discounts that."

"I don't believe it," said the demure little woman.

"Well I do, and I'll tell you about it to prove it. A friend of mine, who had been doing some newspaper work, got the craze for writing advertisements and she went around to a lot of stores, only to find that they were well supplied with people to look after that branch of their business. She did find one firm that was willing to let her try her hand and she began work. In less than a year she was comfortably off for the rest of her life."

"Did she invent some new style of writing or something of that kind?" asked the demure little woman.

"No," replied the blonde, "but she married the senior partner."

ON A CHERRY STONE.

A Talented Convict Carves His Petition for a Pardon on One.

Gesa Berger, the actor and newspaper man, has a picture in caligraphy that has a remarkable history. It is in size 30x43 inches, and is the work of Joseph Loew the most noted counterfeiter that the Austrian government ever knew. When an application is made for a pardon in Austria the red tape policy of that country compels the applicant to address the emperor with all his titles. Emperor Ferdinand had about forty titles.

Loew engraved all of these names, together with his petition for a pardon, on a cherry stone. The letters were so fine that it required the aid of a powerful microscope to decipher them. One day when the emperor visited the prison Loew in person presented a cherry stone to the emperor and told him what it contained. The emperor made an examination, and was so amazed at the work that he gave him an unconditional pardon.

Not only did he pardon him, but gave him a position as a detective to trail down counterfeiters. Loew was a well-informed man in all the arts and rascalities of counterfeiters, and in less than two years after his pardon he ran to the earth almost every counterfeiter in Austria, and died a few years ago covered with detective honors. The picture, although made fifty years ago, is in a remarkable state of preservation.

LYING AS ONE DEAD WAS E. H. BENNETT

OVERDOSE OF MORPHINE LEFT HIM UNCONSCIOUS.

When He Did Not Appear this Morning the Door to His Room Was Forced and Dr. Sutherland Anticipates that He Will Recover—Other City News.

UNCONSCIOUS from an over dose of opiates Ensign H. Bennett was found in his room in his business block on West Milwaukee street, at 8:30 this morning. Mr. Bennett's room is next to the rooms occupied by C. H. Brown and family. This morning, Mrs. Brown not having heard or seen Mr. Bennett, and knowing that he was in poor health went to his door, which was locked. She then informed D. W. Kolbe and William Hemming, who sent for O. K. Bennett, a brother. When he arrived the door was broken open, and there, in a death like stupor they found Mr. Bennett. Dr. Sutherland was called, and said Mr. Bennett was suffering from an over dose of opiates, and that he would probably recover in a few hours, but at 2 o'clock this afternoon he still remained apparently in about the same condition as when he was found. Mr. Bennett is about seventy-seven years old, but has not been in robust health for some years.

This illustrates the effect that quality has upon the price. A. F. ## WATER FIGHT AIED IN SUPREME COURT

THE ARGUMENTS WERE MADE THIS MORNING.

Prosecution Back Assertions With Affidavits and Claim that G. G. Sutherland Is the Only Accredited Attorney For the Company—Defense Enters Denial.

The first bout in the water fight came off in the supreme court at Madison this morning and was somewhat sensational. The result will not be known for some days.

H. H. Hayden of Eau Claire, who is associated with Winans & Hyzer in behalf of the water company, was the first to speak. He gave a history of the Janesville plant with the purchasing clause of the franchise. A short time ago, he affirmed, the city had made a demand for the cost price of the works, which demand was followed by the beginning of the action by the city and the appointment of a receiver without notice. He dwelt especially on the fact that every allegation in the complaint and affidavit of the mayor was made on "information and belief" and in no case was a direct charge made. Moreover, there was nothing whatever in any clause of the complaint to show that anything was to result. The city had demanded a statement of cost and had said nothing to indicate in any way that they intended to buy or that a purchase was contemplated. He closed by claiming that if the receiver was set aside the city would still have ample protection.

Mr. Jeffris then spoke in behalf of the city and said that last September the city made a formal application for a statement of the cost of the plant and declaring that the city desired to buy the works. The company responded with a statement that the cost was $432,000. This the council believed to be fraudulent and in confirmation of that belief, advanced the fact that $232,000 was shortly afterward dropped from the estimate. The city brought an action, he continued, not to annul the corporation but to annul the contract with the city and to compel a true statement of the cost of the plant. The city alleged, he continued, that bonds had been issued to the amount of $170,000, which sum was in excess of the actual cost, and that is a question whether or not the city is liable. That is, whether the bondholders are innocent holders. That being an open question, he held that the city is vitally interested in the preservation of the income of the works. He denied that the motion for a receiver was an ex parte proceeding. G. G. Sutherland, the general attorney for the company, received notice and appeared. Five days later, he said, an appeal was made from the circuit court on the motion to stay proceedings, but the papers filed in the supreme court on this motion were not the same as those filed in the court below.

No Denial Of Threats

In the circuit court there was no denial but that the officers of the company made the threat which the city complained of. In appealing to the supreme court the affidavits of C. S. Jackman and W. G. Maxey were included, to the effect that they did not intend to shut off the city's fire protection.

Passing on to the next point Mr. Jeffris also claimed that the city was entitled to the appointment of a receiver as the income of the works properly belong to the city, the city having had the right to purchase last August at the actual cost. He suggested to the court that three large public meetings and one law suit against the company might be a showing of the public sentiment in the matter. An affidavit was then read by Mr. Jeffris from G. G. Sutherland who said that the stock of the Janesville Water Company was owned one half by W. G. Maxey, one-fourth by C. S. Jackman and one-fourth by G. G. Sutherland. For the last year Mr. Maxey and Mr. Jackman had held the management.

Says a Threat Was Made.

When it was learned that the city intended to commence this action, the affiant continued, Mr. Jackman told the affiant that he had asked the chief engineer of the fire department how he would like to have the fire service of the city shut off. Mr. Maxey was quoted as suggesting that this would be the easiest way to scare the city into dropping any suit. Mr. Sutherland further said that he had been dissatisfied with the company's policy for a year. Mr. Maxey had often said he favored throttling the people until they couldn't squeal, and then they wouldn't make protests no matter what the company did. Mr. Sutherland had not been consulted in any way for the last year, and all his protests against the company's policy had been disregarded.

In another affidavit Mr. Sutherland claimed to be the general attorney for the water company, and set forth that other attorneys did not represent the company but only individual stockholders.

Salaries Not Paid

Mr. Jeffris then presented an affidavit signed by himself stating that he saw the records of the company a year ago last June. At that time the directors voted yearly salaries as follows: President $1,200, secretary $600 and treasurer $600. The salaries were not drawn but were allowed to accumulate so that if the city should seem likely to get control, they could be drawn out thus making the balance of profit less. On this affidavit he also raised the question of whether a company, before the court as a defendant should be permitted to pay for litigation with proceeds that belonged to the plaintiff.

The affidavits of Messrs. Jackman and Maxey, which were referred to are a part of the case. Mr. Jackman says; after setting forth that he is and has been an officer in the company; that the capital stock is $200,000 and owned one-half by Mr. Maxey one-fourth by Mr. Sutherland and one-fourth by himself; that he knew the company to be solvent; that all obligations would be met; that no bonded indebtedness was or would be due until 1907; that only $180 in interest was due and the company was ready to pay it; that the value of the plant exceeded the indebtedness; that the company never threatened to shut off the fire protection and did not intend to do so or embarrass or coerce the city; that he, personally, had never suggested, threatened or advocated such a course and knew of no other stockholder ever doing so; that fire protection could not be shut off without shutting off consumers; that his own property is protected by the water works as much as anyone's; that none of the funds have been diverted from lawful purposes; that before the company had answered the city's complaint, and before the time for so doing had expired the receiver was appointed; that no stockholder or officer of the company had been out of the courts jurisdiction; that G. G. Sutherland had notified no officer or stockholders of the application for a receiver; that he had no authority to appear in this action, for or in behalf of the company in any way or capacity; and that if he did so in any way or form the action was void.

Mr. Maxey's affidavit is practically the same except that he further deposes that when the works were constructed none of the present stockholders were interested therein; that while he has no knowledge as to the cost of the works he believes that with the interests thereon less the net profits it has exceeded $200,000; denies all knowledge of a fraudulent contract between the water company and the Wisconsin Construction Company, and had no knowledge of the sum paid by one to the other; that all knowledge of the cost is derived from the books of said company; that he had no way of knowing that any entry was fraudulent; that the city has never asked or demanded the account books and the same had never been refused; that his statement was rendered as nearly as he could in accordance with the franchise; without intention of defrauding the city and without intentional exaggeration.

Alexander-Greene.

Dr. Lloyd Alexander of Denver, Colorado, and Miss Blanche Greece of this city were married at the home of Dr. Q. O. Sutherland yesterday afternoon by Rev. S. P. Wilder of the Congregational church in the presence of about forty relatives and friends. Miss Frances Kenyon of Chicago, served as maid of honor and Charles Sutherland was best man. The parlor was decorated with flowers and after congratulations had been extended a wedding dinner was served. Dr. and Mrs. Alexander left on the 6:35 train for Chicago and from there they go to Denver their future home. The bride's father is a resident of Reading, Pa., but she has made her home with her cousin, Mrs. Sutherland, for some time past. The groom is professor of surgery in the Denver Medical college.

"Just Beyond."

She is gone wife, mother, so dear,
To the home that waits for us all Blessed sleep; no more the sad tear,
From her closed eyes shall fall.
Just beyond through the clouds and starry realm.

When, Lo! God is waiting there,
He has gathered one more heavenly gem
To shine in His home so fair.

Clasped in His warm embrace the cold clay revives;
Even now she lives once again
Surrounded by angels, mothers and wives,
Who have passed through this world of pain.

The distance is not so very far;
From earth to heaven, 'tis just beyond;
The path is plain, the mile-post stars
That becken to us with glances fount.

Why should we fear, when we come to die,
To awaken in the "great unknown"?
Our entrance in this world is but a sigh,
A struggle, a gasp or a moan.

We start out on our journey at birth,
Without care, thought or a tear,
Then why not rejoice as we have this earth,
When the "just beyond" is so near?

DROWNING STORY NOW LOOKS LESS PROBABLE.

Mrs. Alvis Finds $105 Is Missing from Her Home and Now She Is of the Opinion that Carson Took the Cash and Made It Appear that He Killed Himself.

Chief of Police Acheson is not searching the bed of Rock river today for the body of Albert Carson, and he has given up the idea that Carson committed suicide.

It looks as if the placing of the overcoat and hat on the platform in the rear of Nelson Brothers stable was a ruse to cover up a crime.

This turn in opinion was brought this morning when Mrs. Alvis notified the chief of police that she had been robbed of $95 in gold coin and $10 in greenbacks, and that she suspected Carson as the burglar, and that she did not believe he was in the river. Chief Acheson at once suspended the search for the body, and notified the authorities at Summitville and Keokuk, Iowa, places where Carson had formerly lived.

TALMAGE ON CITY OF BLOOD

CAWNPORE, INDIA, A SCENE OF AWFUL CARNAGE.

Dr. Talmage Tells of the Scenes Recalled by His Wanderings About the City of the Terrible Nana Sahib—Description of the Man.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 9.—Dr. Talmage to-day delivered through the press the second of his "Round the World" series of sermons, the subject being "The City of Blood," and the text selected being, Psalms, 141: vii, Our bones are scattered at the grave's mouth, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth. But mine eyes are unto thee, O God the Lord.

Though you may read this text from the Bible, I read it as cut by chisel into the pedestal of a cross beneath which lie many of the massacred at Cawnpore, India. To show you what Hin-doism and Mohammedanism really are, where they have full swing, and not as they represent themselves in a "parliament of religions," and to demonstrate to what extent of cruelty and abomination human nature may go when fully let loose, and to illustrate the hardening process of sin, and to remind you how our glorious Christianity may utter its triumph over death and the grave, I preach this my second sermon in the "Round the World" series, and I shall speak of "The City of Blood," or Cawnpore, India.

Two hours and ten minutes after its recurrence, Joseph Lee of the Shropshire regiment of Foot, rode in upon the Cawnpore massacre. He was the first man I met at Cawnpore. I wanted to hear the story from some one who had been here in 1857, and with his own eyes gazed upon the slaughtered heaps of humanity. I could hardly wait until the horses were put to the carriage, and, Mr. Lee, seated with us, started for the scene, the story of which makes tame in contrast all Modoc and Choctaw butcheries.

It seems that all the worst passions of the century were to be impersonated by one man, and he, Nana Sahib, and our escort at Cawnpore, Joseph Lee, knew the man personally. Unfortunately, there is no correct picture of Nana Sahib in existence. The pictures of him published in the books of Europe and America, and familiar to us all, are an amusing mistake. This is the fact in regard to them: A lawyer of England was called to India for the purpose of defending the case of a native who had been charged with fraud. The attorney came and so skillfully managed the case of his client that the client paid him enormously for his services, and he went back to England, taking with him a picture of his Indian client. After awhile the mutiny in India broke out, and Nana Sahib was mentioned as the champion villain of the whole affair, and the newspapers of England wanted a picture of him and to interview some one on Indian affairs who had recently been in India. Among others the journalists called upon this lawyer, lately returned. The only picture he had brought from India was a picture of his client, the man charged with fraud.
The attorney gave this picture to the journalists as a specimen of the way the Hindoo dress, and forthwith the picture was used, either by mistake or intentionally, for Nana Sahib. The English lawyer said he lived in dread that his client would some day see the use made of his picture, and it was not until the death of his Hindoo client that the lawyer divulged the facts.
Perhaps it was never intended that the face of such a demon should be preserved amid human records. I said to our escort: "Mr. Lee, was there any peculiarity in Nana Sahib's appearance?" The reply was, "Nothing very peculiar; he was a dull, lazy cowardly, sensual man, brought up to do nothing, and wanted to continue on the same scale to do nothing." From what Mr. Lee told me, and from all I could learn in India, Nana Sahib ordered the massacre in that city from sheer revenge. His father abdicated the throne, and the English paid him annually a pension of $400,000. When the father died, the English government declined to pay the same pension to the son, Nana Sahib, but the poor fellow was not in any suffering from lack of funds. His father left him $60,000 in gold ornaments; $500,000 in jewels; $800,000 in bonds, and other resources amounting to at least $1,500,- 000. But the poor young man was not satisfied, and the Cawnpore massacre was his revenge. Gen. Wheeler, the Englishman who had command of this city, although often warned, could not see that the Sepoys were planning for his destruction, and that of all his regiments, and all the Europeans in Cawnpore.

Mr. Lee explained all this to me by the fact that Gen. Wheeler had married a native, and he naturally took her story, and thought there was no peril.
But the time for the proclamation from Nana Sahib had come, and such a document went forth as never before had seen the light of day. I give only an extract:

"As by the kindness of God, and the good fortune of the emperor, all the Christians who were at Delhi, Poonah, Sattara and other places, and even those 5,000 European soldiers who went in disguise into the former city and were discovered, are destroyed and sent to hell by the pious and sagacious troops, who are firm to their religion, and as they have all been conquered by the present government, and as no trace of them is left in these places, it is the duty of all the subjects and servants of the government to rejoice at the delightful intelligence, and carry on their respective work with comfort and ease. As by the bounty of the glorious Almighty and the enemy destroying fortune of and emperor, the yellow facéd and narrow minded people have been sent to hell, and Cawnpore has been conquered, it is necessary that all the subjects, and land owners, and government servants should be as obedient to the present government as they have been to the former one; that it is the incumbent duty of all the peasants and landed proprietors of every district to rejoice at the thought that the Christians had been sent to hell, and both the Hindoo and Mohammedan religions have been confirmed, and never suffer any complaint against themselves to reach to the ears of the higher authority."

Nana Sahib resolved to celebrate an anniversary. The 23d of June, 1857, would be one hundred years since the battle of Plassy, when under Lord Clive, India surrendered to England.
That day the last European in Cawnpore was to be slaughtered. Other anniversaries have been celebrated with wine; this was to be celebrated with blood. Other anniversaries have been adorned with garlands; this with drawn swords. Others have been kept with songs; this with execrations. Others with the dance of the gay; this with the dance of death. The infantry and cavalry and artillery of Nana Sahib made on that day one grand assault, but the few guns of the English and Scotch put to flight these Hindoo tigers. The courage of the fiends broke against that mud wall, as the waves of the sea against a light house.
The cavalry horses returned full run, without their riders. The Lord looked out from the heavens, and on that anniversary day gave the victory to his people.

Therefore Nana Sahib must try some other plan. Standing in a field not far from the intrenchment of the English was a native Christian woman, Jacobe by name, holding high up in her hand a letter. It was evidently a communication from the enemy, and Gen. Wheeler ordered the woman brought in. She handed him a proposed treaty. If Gen. Wheeler and his men would give up their weapons, Nana Sahib would conduct them into safety; they could march out unmolested, the men, women and children; they could go down to-morrow to the Ganges, where they would find boats to take them in peace to Allahabad.

There was some opposition to signing this treaty, but Gen. Wheeler's wife told him he could trust the natives, and so he signed the treaty.
There was great joy in the intrenchment that night. Without molestation they went out and got plenty of water to drink, and water for a good wash.
The hunger and thirst and exposure from the consuming sun, with the thermometer from 120 to 140, would cease. Mothers rejoiced at the prospect of saving their children. The young ladies of the intrenchment would escape the wild beasts in human form. On the morrow, true to the promise, carts were ready to transport those who were too much exhausted to walk.

"Get in the carriage," said Mr. Lee,
"and we will ride to the banks of the Ganges, for which the liberated combatants and non-combatants started from this place." On our way Mr.
Lee pointed out a monument over the burial place which was opened for Gen. Wheeler's intrenchment, the well into which every night the dead had been dropped. Around it is a curious memorial. There are five crosses, one at each corner of the garden, and one at the center from which inscription I to-day read my text. Riding on, we came to the Memorial church built to the memory of those fallen in Cawnpore. The walls are covered with tablets and epi-taphs. I copied two or three of the inscriptions: "These are they who came out of great tribulation;" also,
"The dead shall be raised incorruptible;" also, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world;" also, "The Lord gave; the Lord hath taken away;" also, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden."

"Get into the carriage," said Mr. Lee, and we rode on to the Ganges, and got out of a Hindoo temple standing on the banks. "Now," said Mr. Lee, "here is the place to which Gen. Wheeler and his people came under the escort of Nana Sahib." I went down the steps to the margin of the river. Down these steps went Gen. Wheeler and the men, women and children under his care.
They stood on one side of the steps, and Nana Sahib and his staff stood on the other side. As the women were getting into the boats, Nana Sahib objected that only the aged and infirm women and children should go on board the boats. The young and attractive women were kept out. Twenty-eight boats were filled with men, women and children and floated out into the river. Each boat contained ten armed natives. Then three boats fastened together were brought up, and Gen. Wheeler and his staff got in. Although orders were given to start, the three boats were somehow detained. At this juncture a boy 15 years of age hoisted on top of the Hindoo temple on the banks two flags, a Hindoo and a Mohammedan flag, at which signal the boatmen and armed natives jumped from the boats and swam for the shore; and from innumerable guns the natives on the bank fired on the boats, and masked batteries above and below roared with destruction, and the boats sank with their precious cargo, and all went down save three strong swimmers, who got to the opposite shore. Those who struggled out near by were dashed to death. Nana Sahib and his staff with their swords slashed to pieces Gen.
Wheeler and his staff, who had not got well away from the shore.

I said that the young and attractive women were not allowed to get into the boat. These were marched away under the guard of the Sepoys.
"Which way?" I inquired. "I will show you," said Mr. Lee. Again we took seats in the carriage and started for the climax of desperation and diabolism. Now we are on the way to a summer house, called the assembly rooms, which had been built for recreation and pleasure. It had two rooms each 29x10, and some windowless closets, and here were imprisoned 206 helpless people. It was to become the prison of these women and children.

Some of these Sepoys got permission of Nana Sahib to take one or more of these ladies to their own place, on the promise they should be brought back to the summer garden next morning.
A daughter of Gen. Wheeler was so taken and did not return. She afterward married the Mohammedan who had taken her to his tent. Some Se-poys amused themselves by thrusting children through with bayonets and holding them up before their mothers in the summer house. All the doors closed and the Sepoys standing guard, the crowded women and children waited their doom for eighteen days and nights amid sickness, and flies, and stench, and starvation.

Then Nana Sahib heard that Havelock was coming, and his name was a terror to the Sepoys. Lest the women and children imprisoned in the summer house or assembly rooms should be liberated, he ordered that their throats should be cut. The officers were commanded to do the work, and attempted it, but failed because the law of caste would not allow the Hindoo to hold the victims while they were being slain. Then 100 men were ordered to fire through the windows, but they fired over the heads of the imprisoned ones, and only a few were killed. Then Nana Sahib was in a rage, and ordered professional butchers from among the lowest of the gy-pies to go to the work. Five of them with hatchets and swords and knives began the work, but three of them collapsed and fainted under the ghastliness, and it was left to two butchers to complete the slaughter. The struggle, the sharp cut, the blinding blow, the cleaving through scalp and skull, the begging for life, the death agony of hour after hour, the tangled limbs of the corpses, the piled up dead —only God and those who were inside the summer house can ever know.
The butchers came out exhausted, thinking they had done their work, and the doors were closed. But when they were again opened, three women and three boys were still alive. All these were soon dispatched, and not a Christian or a European was left in Cawnpore. The murderers were paid fifty cents for each lady slain. The Mohammedan assassins dragged by the hair the dead bodies out of the summer house and threw them into a well, by which I stood with such feelings as you can not imagine. But after the mui-lated bodies had been thrown into the well, the record of the scene remained in hieroglyphics of crimson on the floor and wall of the slaughter house. An eye witness says that, as he walked in, the blood was shoe deep, and on this blood were tufts of hair, pieces of muslin, broken combs, fragments of pinafores, children's straw hats, a card case containing a curl with the inscription, "Ned's hair, with love;" a few leaves of an Episcopal prayer book; also a book entitled, "Preparation for Death;" a Bible, on the fly leaf of which was written, "For darling mamma, from her affectionate daughter, Isabella Blair"—both the one who presented it and the one to whom it was presented, departed forever.

It was about 5 o'clock in the evening when I came upon this place in Cawnpore. The building in which the massacre took place has been torn down and a garden of exquisite and fragrant flowers surrounds the scene.
Mr. Lee pointed out to us some seventy mounds containing bodies or portions of bodies of those not thrown into the well. A soldier stands on guard to keep the foliage and flowers from being ruthlessly pulled. I asked a soldier if I might take a rose as a memento, and he handed me a cluster of roses, red and white, both colors suggestive to me; the red typical of the carnage there enacted, and the white for the purity of those who from that spot ascended.

But, of course, the most absorbing interest concentrated at the well, into which hundreds of women and children were flung or lowered. A circular wall of white marble encloses this well. The wall is about twenty feet high. Inside this wall there is a marble pavement. I paced it, and found it fifty-seven paces around. In the center of this enclosure, and immediately above the well of the dead, is a sculptured angel of resurrection, with illuminated face, and two palm branches, meaning victory. This angel is looking down toward the slumberers beneath, but the two wings suggest the rising of the last day. Mighty consolation in marble! They went down under the hatchets of the Sepoys; they shall come up under the trumpet that shall wake the dead. I felt weak and all a-tremble as I stood reading these words on the stone that covers the well: "Sacred to the perpetual memory of a great company of Christian people, chiefly women and children, cruelly massacred near this spot by the rebel, Nana Sahib, and thrown, the dying with the dead, into the well beneath on the 15th day of July, 1857." On the arch of the mausoleum were cut the words: "These are they who came out of great tribulation."

Now, my friends, go home, after what I have said, to see the beauties of Mohammedanism and Hindooism, which many think it will be well to have introduced into America; and to dwell upon what natural evolution will do where it has had its unhindered way for thousands of years. And to think upon the wonders of martyrdom for Christ's sake; and to pray more earnest prayers for the missionaries and to contribute more largely for the world's evangelization, and to be more assured than ever that the overflow of the idolatries of nations is such a stupendous work, that nothing but an omnipotent God through the gospel of Jesus Christ can ever achieve it. Amen!

UNATTAINED.

When Pan's Syrinx changed her form
To a reed by river's brim, Straight he cut that reed and blew Sounds divinely sweet to him,
For he knew the music fine
Was the soul of her dear shade.
Hour by hour he wooed her well,
That she might not wholly fade;
Kept the reed against his lips
And so held her spirit near.
If perchance by some strange spell
She, repentant, reappear, Still he calls upon her name,
Counting not his vision gone,
But he may not bring to life
And her, living, look upon.
Yet he hopes to, and so sings
Here and there by tempest tossed.
What the heart with love pursues Never can be wholly lost.
Die it cannot while we hope.
Through a shy, elusive gleam
It must haunt the sunny heights
Near the valleys where we dream.

PRICE OF BETRAYAL.

"And what do you say your numbers are?"

"Twenty-two, excellency, myself included, but I!"

"No need to say anything further at present. It is for you to prove yourself worthy of our confidence and of the czar's clemency."

"I assure you we had no political aim in view."

"I cannot listen to that. Have you made out the list you promised?"

"It is here, excellency."

The chief of the secret police took the paper handed to him and silently compared it with one on his desk.

"Dostoevsky," he read and looked up inquiringly, "is he one of you?"

"One of the society, but it was only to read Fourier and Proudhon we met!"

"I cannot hear you, I have told you already. Be silent and answer my questions."

Then he again scrutinized the list and muttered to himself, "Bardin, Loubanoff, Sobotin—I was not aware of these last. You have done well, Radovitch, and you will find that the czar's government is not unkindful of those who serve it well. Your recent action will atone for your past errors and merit reward besides."

"Might I venture to suggest one thing to your excellency?"

"Speak out, man. What frightens you now? I have told you that you have nothing to fear, and I can make my word observed."

"That I know well, and yet, and yet!"

"Well?"

"My life will not be worth a day's purchase if it is known that it is I who have furnished this information."

"You should have thought of that before joining their society. I see you have something to suggest. What is it?"

"That when the seizure by the police takes place no distinction be made between me and the others."

"Of course you will be apprehended with them."

"And tried?"

"Yes, if you wish it, and condemned, too, for that matter. Anything further?"

"And pardoned along with the less guilty of the others, so as to avoid all suspicion?"

"I quite understand you. Rest assured you will have no reason for fear in that respect."

"I thank your excellency. Any further orders?"

"None; you may go."

The chief of police smiled to himself as the spy took his departure.

"And so you want to be treated like your fellow conspirators, that you may not be found out by such as escape us. So be it. You will have all you have bargained for, my man."

That very evening the police raid took place. Taken as they were by surprise and unconscious of any treachery on the part of one of their number, the little coterie of students, artists and young doctors found themselves bagged, without a single exception. They indignantly denied the charge of conspiring against the government. Their discussions were social, not political, they asserted. But General Garashinin's myrmidons merely shrugged their shoulders deprecatingly, perhaps incredulously. They had heard that sort of thing before, and it had meant Siberia for many, if not a more summary fate. Among the 22 was Radovitch, who was also among the loudest in protesting innocence.

In a month the trial took place. Radovitch was not called to give evidence, but took his place among the accused, and, like his companions, had to plead guilty or not guilty to the charge of conspiring to subvert the government.

For weeks the trial dragged its slow length along, for, though few witnesses were or could be called beyond the police who effected the arrests, there were hundreds of documents, many of them immature essays, and most of purely academic interest, to be read, which, in a way that only one of the prisoners understood, had come into the hands of the prosecution as well as brief minutes of their proceedings obtained in the same way.

At length the whole 22 were adjudged guilty. Twelve were sentenced to Siberia, but not to the mines, as the clemency of the czar provided. It was with a thrill akin to horror that Radovitch heard himself sentenced to death, along with the other nine, though conscious that it only formed part of the arrangement that he himself had suggested to General Garashinin.

"Sentence to Siberia would have served the purpose equally well," he muttered to himself, and turning to look at his companions he found himself wondering if his own face was as deathly pale as each of theirs. "To be shot on the glacis of the fortress at sunrise tomorrow morning," he kept repeating to himself, though assuring himself that the words could have no reference to him, for the czar must keep troth even with traitors, or none would be found to serve him in future.

Dostoevsky and the others calmly accepted their fate, and after a hurried farewell to their more fortunate fellows were conducted to their cells for the last time.

Some of the prisoners slept soundly, as though entirely unconcerned in the grim tragedy to be enacted on the morrow. Not so Radovitch. From side to side of his narrow cell, like some caged wild animal, he paced, listening the while intently for the footstep of the messenger that was to recall him to freedom and to the joys of life. The long night passed, all too quickly for him, for whom the messenger so unaccountably delayed. He had seen General Garashinin in court from day to day, and once a glance of intelligence, he persuaded himself, had passed between them. Vainly the two warders, whose duty it was to watch him, sought to induce him to take rest.

"He may come at any moment," he kept saying to himself, "and I had better keep awake in case of any misunderstanding."

His throat was parched, and his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth, but he refused every offer of water or wine, overcome as he was with the terrible anxiety of impending doom, an anxiety rendered all the greater by the conviction that such doom was not intended for him.

At last a faint grayness began to manifest itself through the close bars of his cell. It was the light, the herald of a new day, the last for the condemned men. And now Radovitch began to explain, in husky tones, that his conviction was all a blunder. The two men looked intelligently at each other and pityingly upon the wretched prisoner, but said not a word.

In a few minutes all the ten were assembled in the courtyard of the prison, nine of them calm and collected, for the bitterness of death was already past, one a prey to mortal fear and sickening terror and evidencing it all too plainly in his trembling limbs and livid countenance. In the hurried goodbyes they exchanged with each other Radovitch came in for more than his share of attention.

"Come, Dimtri," said one, "we all owe nature a death. As well pay it now as later."

"Cheer up, comrade," whispered another. "It makes these hirelings rejoice to see you afraid."

"It's all a mistake," mumbled the wretched man. "Where is General Garashinin?"

"He is never present at executions," replied the soldier he addressed. "He issued his final orders last night."

And then a melancholy procession began to move toward the glacis of the fortress prison. A priest led the way, holding aloft a large cross before the eyes of the doomed men, who followed in single file, their ordinary dress covered with a long robe of white linen, at once a covering for the living and a shroud for the dead. The morning sun had not yet risen as the procession wended its way slowly to the place of execution, their life's span narrowed to a few minutes and narrowing with fearful rapidity at every step they took.

At last they reached the place appointed. Five stakes had been driven into the ground near the summit of the long, even slope of the rampart. To these they were bound in couples, facing the east, now kindling with the warm flush of the rising sun, whose coming was to be the signal for their death. Ranged in front of them, at a distance of 15 yards, was a company of soldiers with loaded rifles, whose captain, standing a little way apart, held in his hand a white handkerchief, at whose fall 60 tongues of fire would leap forth and 60 bullets seek the hearts of the unhappy men.

There was still time for the last scene but one in the tragedy before the sun should rise. The cross was held before the lips of each man for a final kiss in turn. Then a dagger was broken over their heads by a soldier detailed from the thousands drawn up to witness the vengeance of the czar. At that moment the sun seemed to bound into space, and every heart almost stopped.

But the officer has not let the signal handkerchief fall. Instead the retreat is sounded on a score of bugles, and the troops march off the ground. The kneeling men were informed that the emperor had been graciously pleased to grant them their lives. They were unbound, and, as if in a dream, tried to realize all that had happened and to congratulate one another ere the last couple had been reached. One of these had fallen forward on his face as far as his bonds permitted. It was Radovitch.

"He has fainted," said a soldier. "Bring me some water, sharp."

"No need to trouble," said the doctor, who had rapidly examined him. "He is dead. The fright has killed him."

It was too true. The chief of the secret police had carried out his promise only too literally. The spy had no longer any reason to fear his betrayed comrades' revenge.—London Tit-Bits.

The Captain's Heteroscopic Eyes.

An aged sea captain whose home is in this city is troubled with a peculiarity of vision which is common to all skippers and ships' officers of high rank who have had long experience on the sea. In this particular instance the captain complains that through long use of the telescope, the quadrant and other instruments used in making calculations at sea the sight has been drawn from the left eye into the one which peers so eagerly through the instruments. He says he can discern objects at an enormous distance with his right eye, but is scarcely able to read with his left.—Philadelphia Record.

He Surprised Her.

"My mind wanders sometimes, don't you know, Miss Bellefield," said Mr. Sappy.

"You surprise me!"

"Aw?"

"Yes. I did not know it had ever returned after its first ramble."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.
